Caveman Style: The Need to Freak By: Taylor Siluwé

Sex parties are everywhere.

Even in my neighborhood in downtown Jersey City—NYC's down-low borough across the Hudson—there is a private affair where attractive men discretely gather, strip down to what they were born with, and proceed to indulge in the most hedonistic of festivities. All around the country beautiful brothers are fucking, sucking, and doing all those nasty group things most only seen in a Dorm Life porn video.

I've become prudish about group sex in recent years. But there was a time when I would have been the first to jump on the coffee table—and without spilling my drink—dance, shed my clothes, and then drop it like it's hot with every cutie in the room. So yeah, I remember the rush derived from goin' wild under the watchful eyes of like-minded souls.

This gleeful pursuit of sexual gratification—better known as Hedonism—is hardly new. Long before religion and government shackled our lustful natures, sex was a pleasure endlessly and sometimes ruthlessly sought caveman style.

Yeah, cavemen got their freak on too. They didn't call it that then, of course, and it was probably more about scratching a recurring itch than anything else, but the end result was the same—something (or someone) got fucked royally. Thousands of years before words like fornication, adultery, and faggot dictated who we could and could not screw, they surely had sexual outlets besides clubbing women and making cave-babies. Perhaps, some of the more creative types even gathered in groups in remote fire-lit locations for a grunting, spirited game of "hide the ox bone."

Okay, maybe only the most popular cavemen called his an ox bone; I can't be certain. And there are no pictures of cavemen cavorting on a SaberTooth skin—actually, there is one, but it was Halloween '92 and I was extremely drunk—but common sense tells me that since 'desire' has been around, it's same sex counterpart has been around as well. Who do you think arranged the rocks so tastefully around the fire? Probably the same caveman who discovered that animal fat made his ox bone slick, and more easily inserted into anything he could wrestle to the ground.

Fast-forward to when Columbus 'discovered' the Caribbean: a place where homosexuality and sexual freedom was shockingly the norm. In fact, all over South, Central, and North Americas, same-gender-loving people were considered normal and fully integrated into indigenous societies. But the Europeans put an end to all that nonsense with their guns and their bibles, murderously policing any sexual activities which didn't conform to the new world order of heterosexuality.

In an OpEdNews.com article titled, Conquistadors of the Senses, author/historian Patrice Jones informs: "Throwing the homosexuals to the hounds sounds like a metaphor for the Republican Party ... but it actually happened back in 1513 in what is now Panama. Then, Governor Vasco Nunez de Balboa condemned 50 homosexual Indians to be torn apart by dogs."

Ouch! What a way to go. But basically, anyone who wouldn't accept Christ or give up their practice of mutual ox bone stimulation was slaughtered in the name of the Lord. Entire communities were wiped out in this fashion. Today, especially in the Caribbean, some of these very locales are the most homophobic places in the world. Funny how that happens.

Gay sex, like hedonism, is also nothing new. The question is: Should it be policed, and if so, by whom? In May '06, an uproar was caused when Raw Dukes—a Harlem raw sex party run by a 24-year-old, college educated entrepreneur—had the temerity to separate itself from the trend of 'raw' parties by forbidding condom use completely. Offenders (anyone caught using a "jimmie") were to be evicted from their tight-body-fuck-fest faster than a fat old drag queen who'd managed to sneak in. The E-vite also boasted over 50 satisfied customers from its last event; one who reportedly said, "I swallowed so much nutt ... there was no need for breakfast at IHOP!"

Yeah—that statement disturbed me too, and my pancakes have never been the same again. But long story short, Raw Dukes was canceled when prominent black gay figures like Keith Boykin rallied supporters and staged a bold protest right on their doorstep.

"They're peddling death," proclaimed Phil Wilson, executive director of the Black AIDS Institute in L.A. in an Advocate interview. But activist and educator Herukhuti countered in his equally blunt essay, "Whose Booty Is This: Barebacking, Advocacy and the Right to Fuck." "Our sex lives as men of color who experience same-sex desires have become issues of national security, thereby placing us, the Rahiems, Jamals, Hectors, Tyrones, and Anthony's, on the national sexual terrorist watch list."

I'd never cross swords with Phil Wilson on the dangers of raw sex. Nor would I argue with Herukhuti's somewhat paranoid spin: not because he has many degrees after his name, not because he founded Black Funk (a Brooklyn based "sexual-cultural" center, which, I admit, I don't fully grasp), but because as a Black gay American male I don't need to be convinced that I'm being watched.

Like I said, despite last year's uproar, the sex parties are still bustin' all over, now they provide condoms and are once again leaving questionable sexual behavior to individual responsibility. But in a country where civil liberties are in general erosion, sexual outlaws—those of us occupying the lowest rung on the civil-rights totem pole—better be wary.

The Black Funk founder seemed disgruntled that leaders would actively step in to police this ageless pursuit of sexual gratification; while, as he suggests, never addressing the equally oppressive prevailing attitudes, which forbid some brothers from joining the party at all: "So what does it mean when OUR organizations perform raids on OUR sexual spaces using the same language and imagery of the State and under the banner of 'keeping us safe'? Why wasn't another part of the raw sex party's policy, "must be in-shape/toned/muscular ... No fats or big guts" considered equally if not more problematic to the well-being, health, and vitality of our communities? Maybe, the policing of bodies in the policy can't be considered homophobic but it definitely is homo-hatred, self-hatred collectivized; and that too equals death."

Yeah, we've all seen those 'no fats, no fems' restrictions. And if you're not 'official'—muscular, gym toned, and preferably young—then don't even think about showing up. It's brutal, without a doubt, but it's also a deflection from the real issue. No one ever died because they couldn't get into a party. But once you do get into a raw sex party ... well, let's just say no possibilities are off the table.

Sex has always been a billion dollar industry; therefore, the sex party is here to stay. I'm not advocating they be policed, just that personal responsibility mingle with civil responsibility as well. Just because we have the right to do something doesn't mean we should. Without a doubt, promoting raw sex between strangers is peddling death, and thankfully, our community responded to the threat on its life. With half our brothers purportedly positive, shutting down Raw Dukes was a step out of the hedonistic fog blinding us to our 50/50 situation.

'Each one, teach one', that's what they say. For at this very second, somewhere, a young boy with low self-image is staring at one of those invitations in his inbox. He's less afraid of catching anything than he is about not being 'official' enough to get in the door. He's not sure his non-existent six-pack will be deemed worthy to slip beneath that velvet rope into a world of hedonism that he's only masturbated about. What does he need to know before he clicks 'reply?'

We can't turn back the clock to the pre-HIV days of sexual freedom, nor should we forget the root causes of our sexual outlaw status. But we can act responsibly for our own well being, mentally and physically, while at the same time, setting a good example for those just beginning to feel the itch of their inner-caveman.

The need to freak is in us all. So from one caveman to another: If spring fever makes you wanna walk on the wild side, then by all means, do so. Put your best 'Freakum Overalls' on and go out and do the damn thing. Just keep your mind wide open as well, remembering that sex is a pleasure not a lifestyle—and that, like alcohol, haphazard use will certainly kill you.

Please fuck responsibly. — www.TaylorSiluwe.com

Whatstea.com, Clay Cane, Sandra Rose...for better or worse, the world just can't seem to get enough of Amiyah Mizrahi. It is no exaggeration to say that perhaps there has never been a lady who swept the ballroom off its feet in such an amazingly short period of time. From Atlanta to New York and everywhere in between, the world has been "wrapped up in Amiyah." Over the past year you've seen pictures of her on just about every gay gossip site in America, but remember which publication captured the images first: Flavalife.

Over the past year we've been Amiyah's most reliable paparazzi source, visualizing all of her finest looks and effects---everything from glamour shots to unexpected candid. Here's a little recap of the year in pictures of America's new ballroom sweetheart.

EVISU

On The Verge Kordai Miyake Mugler

The "Next Best Thing" series of FlavaliLife Magazine highlights up and coming talent within the ballroom community. Each month culture critic Frank Mizrahi profiles a new individual who is "on the verge" of becoming a ballroom superstar.

The 20-year-old Sacramento native Kordai Miyake Mugler is almost too good to be true. Handsome, polite, sensitive, and sincere, it's only been two years since he walked his first mini-ball in Oakland, California, but already people are calling him the next "best thing."

Since he walked at January's Escada Ball the kids have been going wild for Kordai. "All of sudden I started getting tons of messages on MySpace," he laughs as he reflects on how quickly he's become a buzz topic. "And yes ... It feels really good," he adds. But make no mistake, though he's humble he has no problem letting you know that he's better than all the competition: "The only competition I see right now for me would be Dash Prodigy," he lets me know matter-of-factly. "Dash is really one of the only pretty boys that really does it up for the category, and I admire that."

Considering that Dash is Kordai's former house brother, the connections make sense. When I ask him to reflect on his early days as a member of the House of Prodigy, he lets me know how it all began: "A couple of my friends told me about the ballroom scene and insisted that I go with them to a ball. I finally decided to go one night and when I got there my friend told me I would be perfect to walk for 'PrettyBoy Realness.' Obviously I had never walked a ball before, so I was a little scared, but I just went for it. I walked against Ricky Mizrahi who at the time was a Prodigy, and 'Of The Year' for Prettyboy Realness. Even though I didn't win that night, I started a lil buzz. Later that night the overseer for the House of Prodigy approached me and told me she would like for me to walk for her house. And that's how I became a Prodigy. It's been one thing after another since then." Since Kordai's migration from Prodigy to the House of Mugler, he lists the legendary face king Whitney Mugler as one of his new and closest mentors. "Whitney always gives me incredible advice, he represents the best of Mugler and he sets a great example to follow."

For the rest of the year Kordai plans to continue building his reputation as one of the category's new shining stars. When asked when he plans to walk for sex siren, he smiles and says, "You'll just have to wait and see."

As we sit tight waiting, we can rest assured that Kordai's certainly "the next best thing" in whatever category he settles on.

TIMBALAND

SHOCK VALUE

"Everybody was talking their little trash, y'all know who y'all are," Tim said at his studio last week. "They said, 'Tim-baland is falling off.' I never fall off. I just relax like a vampire in the coffin. When I wake up, you better be prepared, because somebody is going to get bit on the neck. Next thing you know, I have a slew of vampires running around. When you become the best like me, you never fall off, you just lean back."

Who else can be hanging out making #1 hits with Nelly Furtado and Justin Timberlake stops by and ASKS if he can be on the track (just cause he likes it). TIMBALAND. So you would think that this new disc is going to be a must have, right? Correct. You must buy and download. Featured artists include Timberlake, Furtado, Jay-Z, MIA, Fall Out Boy, The Hives, and even, Sir Elton John. The first single, "Give It 2 Me," is a "Promiscuous," an uptempo Club Banger made for the mainstream but makes.

For those who need a background on the man known as Timba ...Here's the list of producing credits:

702, Aaliyah, Adina Howard, Alicia Keys, All Saints, Attitude, B2K, Baby, Babyface, Beanie Sigge, Beck, Beenie Man, Black-Eyed Peas, Black Russians, Boyz II Men, Brandy, Bubba Sparxxx, Busta Rhymes, Cee-Lo, Chingy, Da Brat, Danity Kane, Destiny's Child, Devante, Digital Black, Diddy, Dirtbag, Elsie Muniz, Eminem, Fabolous, Fat Joe, Floetry, The Game, Gina Thompson, Ginuwine, Jacki O, Jadakiss, Jamie Foxx, Janet Jackson, Jay-Z, Jazmine, Jennifer Lopez, Jodeci, Justin Timberlake, K-Ci & Jojo, Kelis, Knoc*Turn-al, Lenny Kravitz, Lil Kim, Limp Bizkit, LL Cool J, The Lox, Ludacris, Mel B, Memphis Bleek, Method Man, Missy "Misdemeanor" Elliott, Ms Jade, Mya, Nas, Nate Dogg, Nelly Furtado, Nicole Wray, N.O.R.E, Obie Trice, Papoose, Pastor Troy, Petey Pablo, Pussycat Dolls, Ray J, Shawna, Skillz, Snoop Dogg, Solange, Styles P, SWV, Take 5, Tank, Timbaland and Magoo, TLC, Total Truth Hurts, Tweet Oops (Oh My), Twista, Usher, Utada, Wyclef Jean, Xscape, Xzibit, Young Jeezy, Zane, (just to name a few...lol)

ROD SILVIA & MARCELO GOMEZ

We introduced Rod Silvia and Marcelo Gomez about an hour before taking them out for their “nature boy” photo-shoot, and by the end of the day the two seemed as if they’d been lifelong buds. Rod, a light-skinned 23-year-old straight boy, was really intimidated by the cameras at first, and it was actually pretty charming to watch as Marcelo – a year older, yet the more boyish of the two – talked his new friend into getting sexy for the camera.

We had a tough time finding the right element for our spring-issue boys, but we finally got Rod into the spirit when we hit the water. Maybe being a Pisces (his birthday is February 28), Rod loosened up both his morals and shyness as soon as the bathing suit got wet – and we were there to capture the beauty of the native Floridian, he smiles genuinely as Marcelo kept encouraging him, off-camera, to “show us da money, show us da money!” We tried to get Rod’s swimsuit down just a bit lower, but were really happy with how far this straight Latin hunk with the v-shaped torso was more than willing to go.

The water idea gave us the locale basics for Marcelo, as well; he’s a Virgo (September 4, and wouldn’t he be one HELL of a boyfriend to share it with?), and when we were trying to think of incorporating that into a photo-shoot, Marcelo himself suggested the “nature boy” idea – that, being a little darker and more “ethnic” in appearance, he could pull off the jungle-boy thing with ease ... and sure enough, Marcelo, in his shoot, was flawless; the perfect jungle boy that any expedition of sweaty, horny men would be more than happy to find running around the woods in very little clothing – his sweet, wholesome virginity apparent in one disarming, white grin that we fell in love with. Marcelo was a pure natural in his photo-shoot, indeed pulling off the image ... as well as his tiny-whities, just enough to expose part of one of the best behinds we’ve ever seen live. A shame we couldn’t give you more – the not-so-virginal bisexual boy was in fact a bit of a tease for our sweat-soaked photographer – but we’re sure that this “taste” of Marcelo may be hot enough to find you tracking the streets of Florida in search of the juicy brown nature boy, yourself.

Afterward, we watched in awe as the boys played a round of volleyball on the beach – getting a bit hot ourselves as the FlavaLife coverhunks worked themselves up a sweat – and when Marcelo patted Rod on the butt after, congratulating the straight boy on his win; to us it was as hot as a full-fledged hardcore scene in an adult film.

FlavaLife is proud to present two of Florida’s finest, exposing as much flesh as this magazine can allow. Funny thing is, even fully dressed, these two offer up a truly sensual hunk-next-door kind of longing – Rod the guy you wanna bed, Marcelo the guy you wanna wed – so much so, even the clothes can’t cover the charm and sensuality coming off each of these men in droves.

‘Cause let’s face it - sometimes what’s hidden is even more sensual than what is shown. And for real, you could put traffic cones on these two – and they’d still be hot. Rod’s sexy boy-next-door nervousness, and the sensuality of Marcelo’s deeper-than-the-sea stare, make this issue steam.

We hope you agree.

We hope you enjoy.

We did! Volleyball, especially, never looked so good!

BLOGS THAT MATTER (Part Two) by Victor Hoff

In our last issue, I introduced you to a number of blogs that make reading fun again and, if nothing else, make whittling away your hours at work worth whittling away. In Part two of our ongoing series I want to introduce you to some more Blogs of Distinction and further educate you about the different styles of blogs and what works and what doesn't in case you, the reader, are interested in starting your own Blog. Basically, there are three types of blogs. The first is The Personal. You know. I woke up. I went to the bathroom. I pooped. I realized then that I was out of toilet paper. These by far are the most popular since they don't really require knowledge of anything outside one's self. The downside? Who are you? Are you really that interesting that people will want to come back day in and day out to find out if you finally bought a one-ply or a two-ply and whether or not you let the toilet paper hang underneath or on top of the roll? These are good blogs for people who just feel a need to create. Like a diary. The second type of blog is larger and more impersonal. It's commentary on a particular field or area of interest. Culture. Entertainment. Sex. Food. Whatever. What makes these blogs successful is their point of view. It's okay if you don't necessarily have a background in a given subject (Where do you go to become an expert on popular culture?) but if you're going to reach a wider audience you need to have a strong voice and a well-researched blog. Bitchy comments about what other people are doing wears thin VERY quickly. And anyone can write about pornography. (Hint: It's all pictures.) But to do it successfully you need to find a niche. If you're going to devote a blog to pop culture how about one that spends less time on Britney's sex tapes and more about, say, celebrities under twenty-five or has-beens. VH1 can give you some pointers. Lastly, there are the Megablogs. These are blogs written by authorities in their field. They include many links and the writers usually work for professional organizations that are recognized experts. The blogs below all offer the reader something that is sorely missing in are progressively dumb-downed culture: Food for thought.

Da F Zone

http://faraji.blogs.friendster.com/my_blog/

And who says Iowa doesn't represent America? Faraji is an Iowa City, Iowa native and this attractively packaged blog is full of beautiful gems – quotes, links to books, music, and updates about important cultural happenings. It's a stylishly presented blog that speaks to the best in Midwestern values. Its down to earth style and visually appealing layout make this a must read blog. Faraji reaches across racial categories and introduces his readers to all sorts of fascinating things but his focus tends to be on quotes from important literary figures from the past and a regular feature called "This Day in History." And the best part? He's really fine. Really fine. The only drawback, though, is that if you want to post comments on his blog you have to register through Friendster. And if there's one thing that people don't want nowadays is the obstacle of having to register on yet another social networking site in order to make their opinions known. Aside from that, you'll be hard pressed to find a more erudite blog.

Queering The Apparatus

queeringtheapparatus.blogspot.com/

If you loved the book, go see the movie. Then go visit one of the most educated bloggers around. QTA is a highly creative blog that tends to focus on movie reviews with a smattering of book reviews and musical liner notes. But what makes this blog so appealing is Damion's refusal to compromise in his opinions of things. He calls it like he sees it. And, today, when everyone in their zeal for popularity in the blogosphere gingerly dances around offending anyone, QTA is a refreshing breath of air. And being a critic isn't easy. I know. It takes more than snappy one-liners or cutting remarks to be good as a critic. You need a frame of reference. And QTA has the sort of depth of knowledge that makes reading this well thought out analyses worth the time and effort. And, to boot, he has lots of great links in any number of fields – cultural, academic, pornographic, and sexual.

The Things They Say (NSFW)

thethingstheysay.blogspot.com

Libertine di Homo is fairly new on the blogging scene and the first questions that immediately comes to mind is where have you been? This smart, sexy blog is so well-written and so horned up – he normally writes about his sexcapades – I often ask myself should I move to Chicago where he's based? Lots of bloggers out there chronicle their sexual adventures but most of them are dull and make sex seem like a night at the opera – long, unintelligible, and boring. But what sets this blog apart from the pack is the you-are-there narrative that makes TTTS (The Things They Say) so highly readable. He also has a hankering for all things artistic, so on any given day you might read about art or culture. But let's be frank. Sex sells and when Libertine writes he gives his adventures a kind of sexual immediacy that both raw and touching. And, after all, who would have ever guessed that reading about sex could be so enriching?

CHECK THEM THUGZ AND THEIR FLIX! WE ALSO GOT SOME FREE FUN SHIT FOR YA LIKE DIS DESKTOP CALENDAR. MEMBERS CAN ALSO RATE EM THUGS, SO CHECK OUT THE PIMPST RIGHT HERE OR LOOK AT DA HOOD TALES WE GOT. REMEMBER, DEM THUGZ DON'T STOP TIL YOU BUST DAT NUT.
